

Spanish and Portuguese crowns, because of their Religion, forbade the slave, but those that survived were exterminated by the hard conditions of work and live imposed to the native towns by the conquerors.

On the other hand, in those areas colonized by British, French and Dutch, the native were exterminated too by the illness previous mentioned and by the massive wars and deportations and moreover, in numerous deals with native population, they were systematically violated by the conquerors.

