

The last scientific studies estimated that in the first 130 years of the European colonization died amount the 90-95% of the native population of America, and that made the reason for the European power to abduct million of African men and women (about 40-60 million of black people) to carry them as slaves to America for replacing the labour of the American native deaths, but most of them died during the travel, about 70-80%.

In spite of the fact that it is considered as the mayor human historic demographic disaster, the scientists reckon that many of American, mainly South American people, conserve the genetic inheritance of the native population that were mixed whit the European. Thanks to this, at present we have a more multiracial and multicultural world.
